Name Of Owen J. Roberts
On Fourth List Of Favored Clients

Washington, June 1.—(AP)—A new list of selected clients of J. P. Morgan & Company was placed before Senate investigators today and it included the names of Owen J. Roberts, now Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, and W. W. Atterbury, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The transaction involved took place before Roberts was appointed to the court.

The latest list, the fourth presented, was of persons sold 82,000 units of stock in the United Corporation—Morgan utilities stock holding company—in January, 1929, at $75 each although the price almost at once on the public market was $39.

This list dealt with clients who purchased through Drexel & Company, Morgan affiliate, and included: Pennsylvania State Supreme Court Justices John W. Kephart and William O. Shafer.

Resignations Asked
Governor Gifford Pinchot has demanded their resignations for being on a previous list.

Former Senator Pepper (R-Pa.) also was on the list.

Yesterday a list was presented to those who dealt directly through the Morgan firm.

Atterbury was listed today for 2,500 units and Roberts for 100.

The total units sold to those on the list was in an amount making total possible paper profits of nearly $2,000,000.

A Morgan witness gave the crowd a thrill by testifying partners in the firm paid total income taxes for 1917 to 1929 inclusive of $51,538,000.

Evidence was given by Leonard Keyes, soft-spoken Office Manager of the firm at the suggestion of John W. Davis, Morgan counsel.

In answer to Senator Glass (D-Va.) Keyes said the 20 partners of the house of Morgan paid, including both state and federal levies, income taxes amounting to $5,108,701 for 1927; $6,172,697 for 1928 and $10,990,276 for 1929.

It had been previously testified they paid none for 1931 and 1932.

Evidence was presented today that the United Corporation used an accounting system under which some of its gains could be distributed as "a return of capital" and not as "a taxable dividend."

A potential profit of $122,508,000 for Morgan & Company in 1929 if it had sold securities received by it in forming the United Corporation was also outlined today and agreed to by George Whitney, a partner in the firm.

To Publish Agreement
This phase of inquiry into operations of the international banking firm was reached after it had been decided on a 11 to 3 vote in closed session of the committee to make public the Morgan partnership agreement, save for names of the present partners and the percentages of their interests.

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel now given free rein by the committee, introduced the potential profit figure in connection with the United Corporation deal. Whitney said it was correct.

He directed ridicule at the figure as a "surmise of what might have been done but wasn't."

Whitney had testified yesterday that if the firm had sold the securities it turned over to the United Corporation, in forming that concern, it would have made a profit of $37,000,000.

Three Over-riden
In the committee's executive session being the hearing resumed, Senator Couzens (R Mich.), Norbeck (R S. D.) and Coghlin (D. Colo.) wanted to make all of the partnership agreement public, but were over-riden.

Only a few Senators were present for the public hearing, which again attracted an overflowing crowd to the huge hearing hall.

Morgan kept in the background, sitting near Chairman Fletcher of the committee and smoking a cigar slowly. He listened closely.

John W. Davis, Morgan counsel who had protested making any of the partnership agreement public, sat back of Whitney, passing documents to him at times.

To "Spread Risk"
Testimony has shown that buyers on the three lists previously laid before the committee could have

Horner To Take UP BATTLE FOR APPORTIONMENT

He Wants Bill Taking
Lee Co. "For Ride"
To Become Law

Springfield, Ill., June 1.—(AP)—Governor Horner today expressed regret at the failure of the House of Representatives to act promptly on the congressional reapportionment bill and said he would seek to have the measure passed.

The House yesterday sent the bill to a committee, indicating that a majority was opposed to the re-districting proposal.

Denying that the administration has any intention of abandoning the sales tax as the source of unemployment relief funds, Horner today said the new two per cent bill is being delayed for a short time to permit the drafting of the appropriation bills to accompany it.

No decision has been reached, the Governor said, on what disposal will be made of the sales tax receipts after the first eight months of the next fiscal year.

One plan under consideration is to use the revenue then to replace and make unnecessary the present state tax, which now is 50 cents on each $100 assessed valuation.

Another possibility is that collections would be diverted to counties for reduction of school taxes on general property.

Horner and his advisers plan to use sales tax receipts for relief work for eight months only, believing that improving economic conditions then will make emergency assistance unnecessary.

The Governor denied unconfirmed rumors that, because of opposition to the sales tax, other means would be sought for raising relief funds.

The new sales tax bill is on second reading in the Senate, and apparently will be held there until a final decision is reached on the companion appropriations.

Pick Preferred Bills
Bills to be given preferred status today in an effort to prevent the smothering of important issues during the late-session legislative jam.

All interests were represented at a conference called to perform the work of a "steering committee" and decide what measures should be pushed to the front.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago was scheduled to attend as the representative of the metropolitan area in saving from discard bills of special interest there.

Similar attention was to be given in rescuing measures of importance to downstate counties.

Legislative leaders of both parties conferred with the administration over proposals of general merit.

Many Bills Doomed
Hundreds of bills must be discarded because of the time limitations if the General Assembly is to follow its custom of adjourning late this month.

Final legislative action has been taken on less than 100 bills. This represents approximately a tenth of the measures introduced in the five months since the Horner administration took office.

A partial list of some of the measures before the General Assembly includes:

All appropriation bills for the next biennium. Passage of these is mandatory before July 1, the start of the next fiscal year.

The retail sales tax, the administration's chosen method of meeting the unemployment relief issue.

Economy proposals for reducing salaries and eliminating unessential positions on the state payroll.

Tax assessment and collection changes designed to correct inequities and fix loopholes in the revenue system.

Reorganization
Reorganization of some of the administrative departments in the interests of economy and efficiency in government.

Increased authority for the Illinois Commerce Commission as a means of regulating utilities and reducing rates.

Provision for completing the sewage disposal system started by the Chicago Sanitary District as a means of meeting the water diversion ruling by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Relief for mortgaged farmers and home owners as proposed by the foreclosure moratorium bill before the Senate.

Proposed changes in the system of distributing motor fuel tax revenues for highway purposes.

Minimum wage legislation for women and minors suggested by the governor.

Proposed amendments to make the new beer regulations more effective.

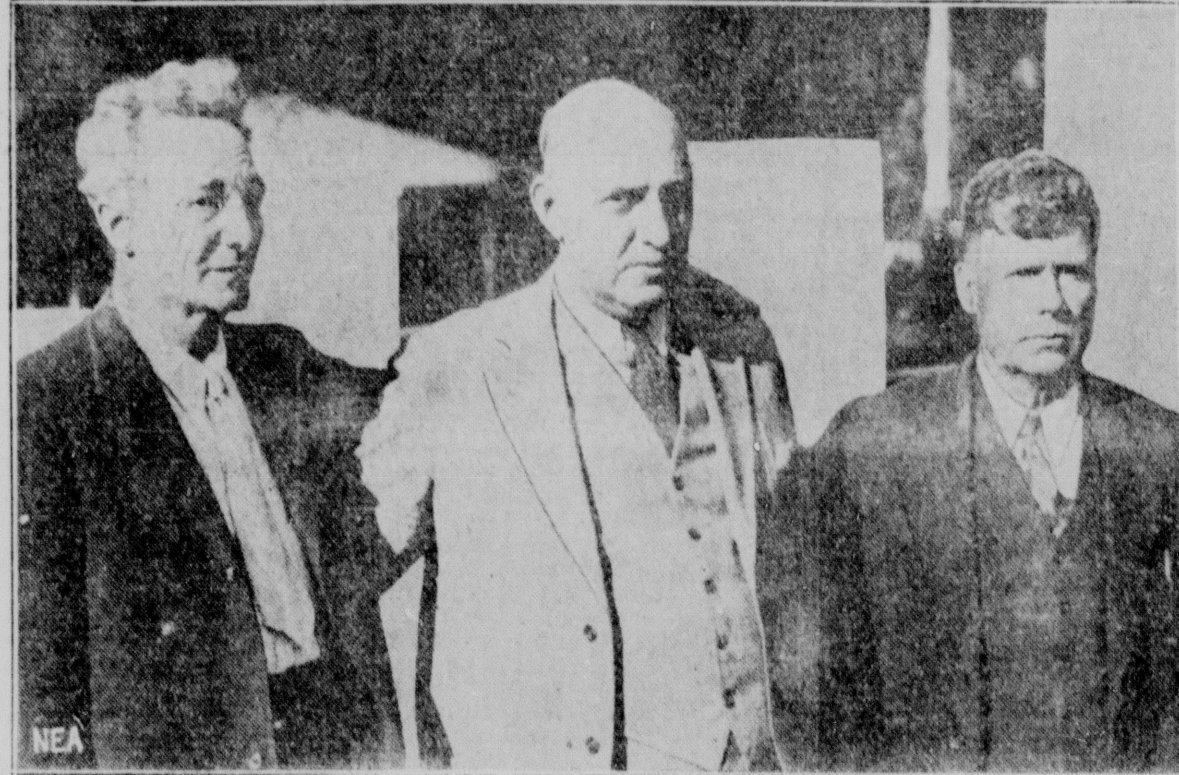

Suggested regulations for solving the milk marketing problems involving Chicago and other large cities.

Claims Big Saving
Horner announced that his economy program has cut more than $45,000,000 from departmental appropriations for the next two years.

"With this administration economy is no idle gesture," the Governor said in a statement. "It has

SOME OF KANSAS
CONVICTS TAKE
TO OZARK HILLS

Two Prisoners Escape
From Oklahoma Pen
Late Yesterday

BULLETIN
Siloam Springs, Ark., June 1.—(AP)—Officers today were closing in on a densely wooded section near here in the belief some of the Kansas state prison convicts had taken refuge in the hills, after exchanging several shots with Chief of Police Bob LaFollette here last night.

McAlester, Okla., June 1.—(AP)—Fugitives from two states' prisons left reckless trails across four southwestern states today.

Violence flared at scattered points along the routes of flight chosen by the 11 desperadoes who fled in two groups from the Kansas state penitentiary at Lansing Tuesday. Bloodhounds sniffed at the heels of two convicted killers who emulated the northern convicts and dashed away from the Oklahoma penitentiary here late yesterday, holding for a time a guard hostage.

The Kansas convicts kidnaped Kirk Prather, whose term as Warden ended last midnight; two guards and three women. The Warden and the guards were freed near Welch, Okla.; the women near Pleasanton, Kas.

Stole Guard's Auto.
Disarming Tom Baskin, guard who was escorting them from repair work at the prison women's ward, the two Oklahoma fugitives Jim Stribling, an Indian, and H. D. Bradbury, sped away in Baskin's motor car, after throwing the guard out, and later abandoned it on a Rocky Mountain road near Haywood, 12 miles west of the prison. A dozen guards and a pack of bloodhounds beat the brush throughout the night.

A gunfight at Siloam Springs, Ark., between Chief of Police Bob LaFollette and three auto thieves who abandoned a Kansas car seemingly that taken by one group of the Lansing fugitives, and the robbery of a motoring couple by two prisoners near Seneca, Mo., bore out officers' opinions that the Kansas convicts were gaining the Ozark mountains and hills in the area where Oklahoma, Arkansas and Missouri converge.

Refuge For Lawless
In this section are the Cookson hills, a refuge for the lawless since frontier days, and, in the belief of Warden Sam Brown of the McAlester prison, the goal of his two runaways.

Officers also suspected the Kansas convicts of killing Night Policemen Otto Durke, who tried to prevent a tire shop robbery at Chetopa, Kas., early yesterday, and during the day there were reports that Wilbur Underhill, the "tristate terror" who led the Kansas break, was leading fleeing bands near Miami and in Osage county, Okla., to the west. Search, however, was fruitless.

Told Of Separation
The two convicts who hitchhiked a ride with E. K. Blair and Miss Alice Braithwaite of Joplin, Mo., threatening them and driving them two hours before releasing them, said they were Jim Clark and Clifford Dopsom. One of them, Blair said, declared he was in the group which kidnaped the women in Kansas. He also said, according to Blair: "I had to kill a bull."

The prisoners' conversation, Blair declared, indicated they had separated from their three "pals" but a short time before. There were five men in the group which captured Mrs. J. M. Wood, her 17-year-old daughter, Louise and Miss Cloris Wears, 17, of Kansas City, Kas., and six led by Underhill, in the band which abducted the Warden.

Mother Kills Her
Children And Self
Springfield, N. H., June 1.—(AP)—Mrs. Walter C. Gardner, wife of a prominent lumber dealer, slashed the throats of her three children as they slept late last night and then committed suicide in their home here. The bodies of the children were discovered by the husband who found Mrs. Gardner dying.

The children were Edith, 11; Nathaniel, 6, and Walter, Jr., 10 months. Mrs. Gardner was 42.

Verdict Of Accidental Death
Returned After Inquest Held
Over Body Of Mt. Morris Man

Coroner Frank M. Banker yesterday afternoon conducted an inquest over the body of Clifford Alvin Miller of near Mt. Morris, who died yesterday morning at the Katherine Shaw Bethel hospital of injuries sustained in an automobile crash about 3 o'clock Tuesday morning in Oregon. The jury heard the testimony of Dr. J. M. Beveridge, Elmer Pryor, George Ufferts, Ralph Stiles and Deputy Sheriff Victor Westendorf, after which a verdict was returned finding that death resulted from a basal skull fracture and other injuries incurred in the accident.

There were no witnesses to the accident and all who testified reached the scene after the crash and found Miller's unconscious body lying in the street about 30 feet from his wrecked car. Some of the witnesses assisted in transporting him to the local hospital later.

The body was taken back to Mt. Morris last evening where burial will take place.

Some Merchants Turn Over Unclaimed Sales Tax Collection
To League Community Kitchen

The following Dixon merchants have turned over to the community kitchen the un-claimed sales tax which they collected from patrons under the recent invalid law: W. H. Ware, Minnehan & Nicholas, Elks Club cigar counter, Snow White Bakery, Puffs Confectionery, James & Son pool room and George Nettz & Co.

In Springfield today Director Joseph Rice of the Finance Department today asked merchants to pay into the emergency relief fund all unrefunded collections under the unconstitutional three per cent sales tax law. The action was proposed by a legislative resolution.

"By turning over to the emergency relief fund all money that they have been unable to return to their patrons," Rice said, "the merchants will be keeping faith with the state and obeying the humanitarian intent of the law."

"Where is the eagle?" Scouty cried. "Perhaps, if we all run and hide, the bird will come down here. And yet, would that do any good?"

"It couldn't say a single word, because, after all, it is just a bird. Oh, please advise us, little elf. We will do what ever we should."

"The main thing that we want to find is where the bird is. We don't mind what trouble we are put to. Can't you think up some fine plan?"

The elf sat down and scratched his head. The Tinkles waited till he said, "I told you I would help you, and I'll do the best I can."

"Now, all you lads run out of sight. I will whistle, then, with all my might. If Baldy, the eagle, hears me, he will come this way."

"I am sure he won't land on the ground, if everyone is hanging round. However, if I am alone, he'll drop right down to play."

"Don't fret. You can depend on us," said Coppy. "We won't start a fuss. We'll hide behind some trees until you tell us to come out."

"If good old Baldy comes, all right, grab hold of him and hang on tight. Perhaps, then, you can tell him just what this is all about."

The elf replied, "You bet I can." Then out of sight the Tinkles ran. They peeked and watched the little elf, whose hands went to his face.

"He is whistling now," said wee Duncy. "Gee, he whistles loud as loud can be. I will bet that there will soon be some excitement 'round this place."

Just then they heard a whistling sound and Scouty, as he looked around, said, "Look! The eagle is coming!"

"Our wee elf friend sure was right!" The eagle swooped down through the trees and landed on the ground with ease. "Gee, he's a big one," Coppy whispered. "What a pretty sight!"

The Tinkles kept far out of sight until the elf said, "It is all right. I have the eagle by the tail, so he can't fly away."

"You Tinkles come out, one by one. That will not scare him. It will be fun when he finds out you are very friendly. Maybe he will play."

Wee Duncy ran out from a tree and said, "Oh, he won't play with me! I'd never trust that big, long beak. Supposin' he'd get mad?"

"As sure as fate, I would get pecked. At least that is what I'd expect. I will bet when anybody teases that bird, it's too bad."

Then Scouty came upon the scene. "Aw, shucks, he doesn't look so mean," said he. "I am going up to pat his head. I am not one bit afraid."

Then, as he did, the bird stood still. This gave the whole bunch quite a thrill. "I told you so," said Scouty. "A new friend we all have made."

The elf then said, "Say, Baldy, I am sure you've flown across the sky with two small girls. They are missing. I'll bet you know where they are."

Old Baldy promptly shook his head. "Ah, you are right," wee Windy said. "The eagle knows. I only hope the place is not so far."

"Oh, my, no difference will that make. Another trip this bird will take," exclaimed the little elf. "Who is brave enough to go along?"

"I am," cried Duncy. "It will be fun, but how is this stunt to be done?" The eagle, lad, will carry you," the elf said. "He is strong."

"Gee! Wait a minute," Duncy cried. Then Scouty snapped, "Aw, take the ride. You'll be a hero, if you find the girls, both safe and sound."

The eagle grabbed wee Duncy by the belt and sailed up toward the sky. The lad cried, "Wish me good luck," to the Tinkles on the ground.

(Duncy is landed in a very peculiar place in the next story.)

Everyday Religion

PLAYING THE FOOL

(By Dr. Joseph Fort Newton)

Sir John Reith said in a talk the other day: "It is a priceless asset to be able to play the fool just on occasion when you want to and mean to."

Exactly. Even the gravest men—not the solemn men, but men who have a serious plan in life—love laughter and a little nonsense now and then. One of the oldest and best of our proverbs bids us "Be merry and wise," because it is wise to be merry.

On ship-board, the second night out, there is always a carnival of break the ice of formality. Dignified men and women blow horns, toss toy balloons, and wear paper caps of fantastic design. It is proof of the truth that laughter, freedom from care, is the natural human mood; and that is why all wise men toil gravely in order that one day, soon or late, the whole world may ring with laughter, when man has learned how to live.

The trouble with most of us that we play the fool when we do not want to, do not mean to, and do not know we are doing it. Alas, we do it in regard to the highest things of life, too. St. Francis was called "God's clown" by the men of his day. To them it was a funny kind of life to live, throwing away his chance for wealth, getting in bad with the "best people," and going about preaching to men and even birds!

Was Francis playing the fool when he went singing through his sad age, preaching his gospel of beauty, pity and joy? No, it is we who are fools when we imagine a selfish, self-absorbed life will ever

No Question How He Voted!

For fourteen long years Al Smith had waited for this chance—and is he enjoying it! Here's New York's famous ex-governor smiling broadly as he registered before casting his ballot for prohibition repeal as New York state wets swamped the dregs 10 to 1. Mrs. Smith stands behind him; Mrs. Ruth Briggs, election official, beside him.

turn out to be a happy life. How foolish to think that what really matters is the kind of a house a man lives in, rather than the kind of man who lives in the house! Surely that is to put the cart before the horse.

The world is in a mess today because we have played the fool, all of us. We have imagined that to exploit our fellow men will give more satisfaction than to serve our fellow men, and that is idiotic. We are fools when we use men to make money instead of using money to make men. We are playing the fool when we live as if hate were the law of life, whereas love is its very essence, its meaning, and its fulfillment!

Daily Health Talk

HIGH CALCIUM-VITAMIN DIET

It is estimated that the average person requires a daily intake of approximately 0.7 of a gram of calcium (0.425 of an ounce).

Vitamins, and particularly vitamin D, appear to influence both the absorption and the utilization of calcium. A good dietary must therefore include an adequate supply of calcium as well as of vitamins D and vitamins A, B and C.

Vitamin D can be secured in cod-liver oil or in the artificially produced vitamin D, viosterol. Vitamins A, B and C are to be found in orange juice and in tomato juice, as well, of course, as in a variety of other food elements.

A well-known authority on dietetics is of the opinion that probably each of the vitamins A, C and D bears an important relation to the metabolism of calcium and phosphorus in the development of bones and teeth.

Vitamin B plays an important role in the maintenance of intestinal tonicity (muscle tone affecting intestinal function). In this way it probably exercises a desirable influence in facilitating the absorption of calcium, as well, of course, as of other substances.

Citric acid, which is found in oranges and other citrus fruits, affects the diffusion of calcium in the blood.

In this connection, too, it is important to bear in mind the influence of sunlight.

Vitamin D is generated in the body by the action of sun on the skin. It is ordinarily desirable, therefore, to secure a good coat of tan during the summer months.

Such a "coat" should be obtained over a prolonged period, the exposures being started gradually and for only short periods of time.

Fair skinned persons who do not tan may take vitamin D in the form of cod-liver oil or one of its substitutes. It is interesting to note that following such vitamin D treatment persons who never tanned before may obtain a good "coat."

EFFECTS OF EXERCISE

Hard physical labor, once the lot of the majority of people, has in this machine age been appreciably reduced.

The human constitution, however, appears to be in need of a certain amount of muscular effort, and to make up for the lack of exercise in work men have taken up voluntary exercise and athletics.

The latter has been said to differ from exercise in that it contains an emotional element, athletics being in the nature of play through physical effort.

In recent times the effects of exercise upon the body have been subjected to a number of scientific studies.

It has been asked: What are the desirable effects of exercise? And the answer appears to be that exercise leads to increases in muscle size, in strength and in endurance.

Even as far back as 1628 William Harvey, discoverer of blood circulation, wrote: "The more muscular and powerful men are the firmer their flesh; the stronger, thicker, denser, and more fibrous their hearts; the thicker, closer and stronger are auricles and arteries."

Today we know that appropriate exercise produces desirable chemical changes in the blood, improves circulation and respiration and new coordinations in the nervous system.

Dr. Steinhaus, who has written upon the chronic effects of exercise points out that the trained body efficiently, propelling more blood

As Hitler Pledged Peace for Arms Parity

A scene fraught with importance to world peace is pictured here as Chancellor Adolf Hitler (indicated by arrow) read to Germany's hastily summoned Reichstag his message pledging the Reich's willingness to support President Roosevelt's proposed non-aggression pact provided Germany is given arms parity.

has a heart which functions more per stroke, with a corresponding increase in the heart's rest period and a consequent slower pulse.

The faster circulation of the blood breaks up the older red corpuscles and stimulates the production of new blood cells. More oxygen is carried to the active tissues. In this way the body as a whole benefits.

In any case exercise should be reasonable in degree.

SCIENCE IS LOSING ITS OLD CERTAINTY

By Bruce Catton

In "The Few Background of Science," Sir James Jeans looks very thoughtfully at the old way in which the traditional cook-sureness of science has been collapsing in recent years, and concludes that mankind is beginning to look out upon the universe through a number of brand-new windows.

No longer is science confident that it knows anything of the nature of the objective universe. It is beginning to wonder if it ever shall know anything about it. When it tries to explore the universe it is like a man exploring the surface of a desert as he walks over it; his own footsteps constantly raise clouds of dust, which obscure his vision.

"Our vision of nature," remarks Sir James, "includes the clouds of dust we ourselves kick up. We may make clouds of different kinds, but there is no way of crossing the desert without raising a cloud of some kind or other to obstruct our view."

The old, purely mechanical view of nature fails, since "it makes the mistake of thinking that the weather-vane determines the direction from which the wind shall blow." Studying symptoms, it mistakes them for causes. The determinist is left at sea; and, says Sir James, "crevices have begun to appear in what used to be considered the impregnable closed cycle of physical science."

Your reviewer, who is a great blockhead at mathematics, admits that part of this book was "way over his head. But, in spite of that, he found the volume very much worth reading—and he believes you will, too.

Mop Man "Mops Up" Would-Be Robber

Chicago—When James Arlington goes about his job of mopping the floor at Williams Grill he mops anything that gets in his way. So he literally "mopped up" a gunman who told police his name was Arthur Mannus, 22, when he attempted to rob the cashier. James manipulated the mop so that he caught Mannus with the dirty, wet end and floored him. Police completed the capture.

Auto Crash Results In Two Fatalities

Bloomington—An automobile accident near here claimed its second victim when Mrs. M. J. Baker Downers Grove died as result of flames which enveloped the car after it had left the road and overturned. Her 15-year-old daughter Helen, was burned to death in the wreck.

Sidelights In News In Capital Of United States

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON — Appearances before Congressional committees often are regarded pretty much as bad dreams by those in the administration. The going sometimes is rough.

President Roosevelt, however, has three men in his official family whom he can send to the Hill at almost any time with confidence that they will be able to stand up against almost anything sent their way.

One is young Lewis Douglas, director of the budget. Then there is Cordell Hull, Secretary of State. And Claude Swanson, Secretary of the Navy.

Douglas went before the Ways and Means committee of the House the other day to explain the administration's industrial recovery bill.

Douglas, who served three terms in the House from Arizona before the President picked him for the intricate job of cutting down on governmental expenses, visibly impressed those 25 gentlemen who have the reputation of being about as "hardboiled" a group as there is on the Hill.

He talked their language, because he has served alongside them in the House. He seemed to know what they were interested in having brought out more clearly and anticipated their questions.

THRUST AND PARRY—

One was reminded of the days when Ogden Mills appeared before Ways and Means. Mills, too, is a former member of the House and would match wits and words with the best of them.

Mills' appearance before a congressional committee always was the signal for a good show. He would argue and wrangle with the committee members as if he were the inquisitor instead of the witness. Some of the stormiest, yet most delightful, committee sessions ever held at the Capitol centered around the youthful Mr. Mills.

It isn't always so easy. When Pat Hurley was Secretary of War in the Hoover administration he became so infuriated at a committee session that he got up and stalked out of the room.

MINUTE MEN—

Cordell Hull, Roosevelt's Secretary of State, has long experience in the House back of him, as well as a turn in the Senate. If there are any appearances to be made on reciprocal tariff agreements, the Secretary is ready. He has served on both Ways and Means of the House and the finance committee of the Senate.

Secretary Swanson should find the occasions he is called to Capitol Hill to discuss naval affairs relatively simple. He was on that committee for years while a Senator, and before that served a long time as a member of the House.

WEEKLY SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Jesus Faces Betrayal And Denial

By WILLIAM E. GILROY

The "upper room" in Jerusalem where Jesus commemorated the Passover with His disciples has become a sacred place in the thought of Christendom. It no longer exists so that men make pilgrimages to it, but they cherish it in their hearts, and perhaps it is just as well that it should command their souls, through the imagination rather than as a traditional reality. The upper room is a sacred symbol of communion and nearness to the Master.

The communion of the upper room was not, however, in the happy ecstasy of religion. A cloud of sorrow was cast over the group as Jesus spoke of his betrayal and assured the disciples that one of them would be a traitor. It was natural that these disciples should ask one by one, "Lord, is it I?"

He did not immediately satisfy their questionings, but instead, reminding them that it was one of the twelve who would dip with him in the dish, he first of all pronounced his blessing, and in the sharing of food and in the common drinking of the cup he established the historic basis for that rite which is still the symbol of communion and fellowship in the Christian Church.

In mystic words, Jesus referred again to his approaching death and to the blood of the covenant poured out for many. Then, when they had sung a hymn, they went out to the Mount of Olives. Apparently as they went, or after they arrived at the mount, Jesus again spoke of the trying times that were to befall the disciples. Peter, bold in his self-assurance, boasted that though all disciples might deny the Master he would be faithful.

It was then that Jesus spoke that prophecy so soon to be fulfilled. "Verily I say unto thee that this day, even in this night, before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice." The Master's prediction only roused Peter to more vehement protestation, in which all the disciples joined; yet how soon the Master's words were to be fulfilled. They were to fall off one by one through weariness and temptation, while the Master went alone to Gethsemane and Calvary.

When we look beyond the cross and beyond the agony of the Master in Gethsemane how much may we not cherish the experience in the upper room! Here the disciples were at their best, still earnest and intense in the devotion that had allied them with Jesus and that had led them courageously and hopefully to share in the enterprise of the Kingdom.

Who knows how little even in the heart of Judas there may have been the lurking purpose of betrayal, or how sudden may have been the gust of temptation that assailed him and overwhelmed him? The remembrance of the upper room must have done much to hold the disciples true after their downfall, when, conscious of their weakness, and repentant, their souls were still filled with the glory of hope and with the faith that revived in power as they realized that their Master was still living.

Perhaps one suggestion of the lesson is that we must not trust too much to the experiences of the upper room, but in the times of stress and strain, when we are tempted and tried in daily life, we must look to the living presence of the Master to strengthen and save us.

NATIONAL GRAIN CORPORATION TO HAVE BUSY YEAR

Officers' Embarking On Another Year Confident In Plans

Chicago, June 1—(AP)—The National Grain Corporation, one of the world's largest cooperative marketing agencies, embarked today on another fiscal year with its officials confident of large and profitable operations.

Despite prospects of the smallest American wheat crop in recent years, due to weather conditions, the corporation has prepared to handle as much or more of the grain as in the 12 month period ended a year ago—180 million bushels.

The reason for the large prospective volume, officials said, was an increasing membership in virtually every important wheat state. Already about 300,000 farmers are members.

As for the Grain Stabilization Corporation, companion organization that sought for several years to hold wheat prices firm, officers of the Farmers National said it probably would not again enter the market.

William F. Stahl, assistant to President George S. Milnor said that as in past years the objective will be obtaining for the farmer the highest possible return for his wheat.

To Divide Profits
"Any farmer who sells grain at one of the corporation's elevators will receive the price on the day he sells," he said. "The corporation then will market his wheat to the best advantage. Any profit we make during the marketing will be returned to the farmer at the end of the year."

Regarding the corporation's operations in the past year, Stahl said there would be "several interesting developments at the board meeting a week from today and in the annual report to be made public at the stockholders' meeting in August."

Officials of the corporation indicated its financial condition was more than satisfactory. Its largest single obligation is $16,000,000 owed to the government through the Federal Farm Board, now liquidated. That debt, contracted for use in buying wheat from the farmer for re-sale, will be amortized over a 10-year period.

Even larger loans than that from the Farm Board reportedly have been obtained by the corporation from commercial banks, a huge capital.

Administrators Of Farm Relief

Charles Brand

Farmers are looking to these two men for benefits under the Roosevelt administration's farm relief act. M. L. Wilson is the wheat production administrator, Charles Brand is a general administrator of price-lifting activities.

RUPPERT, YANKS' OWNER, FEARFUL OF A SHUT-OUT

Big Brewer Magnate Is Proud Of His Base Ball Outfit

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor
New York, June 1—(AP)—The baseball customer may now prefer the bleachers to the grandstand. Babe Ruth may be slowing up and nearing the end of his glamorous career, but all's well, so far as Colonel Jacob Ruppert is concerned, so long as the Yankees justify his $10,000,000 investment by remaining the best club in the big leagues.

The fact that today marks the tenth anniversary of his acquisition of sole ownership of the Yankees is merely incidental to the Colonel. They were world champions then, when he paid $1,250,000 for the half-interest of his partner, Col. T. L. Huston, on June 1, 1923. They are world champions now.

"I'm worried now for fear the Yankees will get shut out some day this season, and end another great record they have been piling up ever since August of 1911," said Colonel Ruppert. "That fellow F. J. Zell of Cleveland had me nervous last week when he held our club runless for seven innings but we beat him in the eighth."

The Colonel's eye may twinkle, but he does not conceal this intense interest and pride in the Yankees. He knows other clubs must be built up. He is willing to help them, as he has done with the Red Sox this spring, but is never satisfied unless the Yankees are on top.

He sees no more than 15 or 20 games a season but he follows the club's fortunes closely.

Three Stand-Out Games
"The three games that stand out most in my memory," he admitted today, "are the last games on the 1927, 1928 and 1932 series. I felt pretty good when we made it four straight the first time. But that had been done before, so I felt better when the Yankees ran for 'our' more in a row the next year."

"That was something new in baseball this. I hardly slept the night before the last game in Chicago last year, for fear we might lose. I played that last game harder, I think than any man on the field."

There is, he thinks, nothing wrong with baseball nor any lack of popular interest but he is convinced the day of $75,000 and $80,000 salaries for a player like Ruth is definitely gone.

"Readjustments which have been made within the past year or two are here to stay," said the Colonel. Baseball salaries grew entirely out of proportion. Players were thinking more about how and where they could make or spend money than they were about the game."

"To me perhaps the most beneficial development of the last few years is the so-called chain-store system, which the Yankees have adopted," he says.

Eleven Have Not Yet Adopted Increased Collections

New York, June 1—(AP)—Forty-five state legislatures met this year and 32 of them imposed new taxes or substantially increased old ones.

The additional taxes will exceed a quarter of a billion dollars in one year. Eleven of the legislatures, though debating new taxes, either failed to impose any or had their actions nullified by the courts. Eight relied only upon beer and wine for new revenue.

Eleven states adopted income taxes for the first time, seven others raised existing taxes on income. A total of 20 states now have this form of taxation.

Three states levied on gross incomes. Six adopted taxes on retail sales. Twenty-one legalized beer and wine and imposed taxes upon both.

Two states defeated sales tax proposals and the courts voided three states voided sales tax laws. Two

DARLING FOOL

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MONNIE ODARE, young and beautiful, suite for Europe with an old friend, MISS ANSTICE COREY, Monnie believes DAN COREY, with whom she has been in love, has lifted her purity because his parents look down on Monnie who is poor. Dan's parents want him to marry wealthy SANDRA LAWRENCE. Sandra, pretending to be Monnie's friend, does her best to win Dan even telling him Monnie is going to marry CHARLES EUSTACE, another admirer.

ARTHUR MACKENZIE, a rich, middle-aged New Yorker, sits on the same bench as Monnie. He showers her with attentions and one night in London asks her to marry him. Monnie hesitates, promising to give her answer next morning. While she is trying to make up her mind what to do she receives a letter from Dan explaining his past neglect and begging her to forgive him.

Monnie decides to return home, taking the first boat. Mackenzie, who has been called back to New York on business, is also sailing.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXIX

CHARLES EUSTACE, tall, lean and elegant in his dinner clothes, lounged against the fireplace in Sandra Lawrence's home.

"I asked you to come in," Sandra said softly, "because there was something special I wanted to talk about. Sit down."

The young man shot her a rapid glance out of keen dark eyes, then subsided into a deep red chair. The girl, affecting a demureness and shyness foreign to her, stared into the flames.

"You're going to the party to-night, I suppose," Charles ventured in the awkward silence.

"Oh, yes. That was it," Sandra said. To Charles' puzzled stare she continued, "Someone told me you were angry at me and I did so want to get things straightened out before we met when there were people present. So awkward—" her voice trailed off.

Charles grinned. "Angry at you? But that's absurd. Why should I be?"

"I don't know!" Sandra gave him a fleeting glance from under long lashes. "It does sound silly, doesn't it, when we know each other really so little. Only—well I fancied perhaps someone had talked about me, prejudiced you against me on account of your friendship for someone else."

This was arrant nonsense and Charles said so. His agreeable voice seemed to soften the blow.

"What precisely," he inquired amiably, "do you mean?"

Sandra laid her cards on the table. "You do like Monica O'Dare awfully, don't you?"

He stiffened. "Yes, I do. Does she come into this?"

Sandra shrugged, a gesture she had perfected. "A bit. You see, she used to want Danny and he's mine."

"Oh, yes?" Charles seemed faintly bored but any close observer would have noted the sudden gleam in his eyes.

"He always has been, really," said Sandra, warming to her topic. A year or two ago he and Monnie had a bit of a flirtation. He didn't take it seriously but she did. Poor girl, she hadn't much experience with beaux and Dan is such a lamb he didn't know she'd misunderstood."

CHARLES stood up, not liking any of this. "I'm not at all sure she did," he interrupted. "My impression always has been that the affair was about fifty-fifty."

"Aren't you quaint?" trilled Sandra. "It wasn't at all. I rejected income tax proposals."

Some of the other objects of fresh taxation were: stores, chain stores, foreign securities, oleomargarine made from imported oils, intangibles, building and loan companies, banks, pari-mutuel race betting, corporations, telephones, gross insurance, oil, gasoline, gross receipts of power companies, inheritances, cigars, pipe lines and "classified business."

JELKE DIVORCE ACTION MAY BE STARTED AGAIN

Rhode Island Jurist Holds Both Were Partly At Fault

Newport, R. I., June 1—(AP)—The question whether F. Frazier Jelke and his young wife, barked in divorce to the streets, each other, would seek decrees elsewhere, stirred interest in Newport today.

Judge Charles A. Walsh ruled late yesterday that both were guilty of "extreme cruelty" toward each other and that therefore, under the laws of Rhode Island, neither may have a divorce.

The Judge cleared the 27-year-old Mrs. Eugenia Woodward Jelke, former Alabama belle, of charges of infidelity preferred by her middle-aged millionaire husband during a two-week court fight.

There was no doubt, the Judge said, that Jelke was infatuated with his wife, but he said he was not convinced that "she reciprocated this affection." The court expressed the belief Mrs. Jelke married to obtain luxury, but he did not attach blame to her for this because, he said, at her age "such things are to be expected, and she liked excitement, social affairs and a good time."

While upholding Jelke's charge of cruel treatment, he cleared Mrs. Jelke of his charge of excessive drinking and said there was convincing evidence Jelke assaulted her seven times. The court declared Jelke had proved extreme cruelty insofar as it had been shown that his wife cursed him, bit him, tore his shirt, humiliated him before his friends, and nagged him.

There are about 10 total eclipses of the sun in every 18 years.

know them both so I have the straight of it."

"But what," demanded Charles with some impatience, "has all this to do with me?" He looked rather ostentatiously at the watch he had been fingering for a moment.

"I thought I'd like you to know how matters stood," the girl told him glibly. "I didn't want you to believe I'd done any porching. Someone told me you'd said—"

"I never talk about women," Eustace said, a note of harshness coming into his voice. "I leave that to their own sex. You must excuse me now. I'm overdue at my uncle's."

He was fuming as he took his hat and coat from the maid at the front door. The girl was a fool. There were no two ways about it. What did she expect to gain by talking about Monnie to him?

Was she really, as Kay believed, such an enemy to Monnie that she would deliberately try to undermine her with Charles after having stolen Dan from under her nose? Or was it a bit more complex—was Sandra such an egoist that she wished everyone, even Charles Eustace who knew her so casually, to think well of her?

However it was, she was a nasty little cat and he sincerely disliked her.

He walked off into the autumn night, frowning. Why hadn't he told her exactly what he thought of her, he asked himself. She hated Monnie—that much was plain. How had she dared to speak of her in that tone to him?

Charles acknowledged, with a pang, that Monnie's absence cost him a great deal. He was missing her more than he would have believed possible a year ago. She was so sweet. That was it—so everlastingly sweet and clean and desirable! She made all these other girls with their poses and affectations and meannesses look drab and uninteresting.

Monnie—she admitted it to himself at last—had come to be the core and center of his life. He loved her—and she was in love with another man. There was nothing he could do about it. Unconsciously he groaned to himself. Nothing he could do, he repeated, except to stand by and let her friend if she needed one. He rather thought she would.

THE party of which Sandra had spoken was a barn dance at the summer place of the Bliss's, some 15 miles out on the river road. The great studio barn was heaped, for the occasion, with trees and decorated with pumpkins, cornstalks, russet leaves and gourds. Charles, bored with the idea of assembling a special costume for the affair, knotted a bandana over his crackling shirt front and lounged on the sidelines, watching the merriment. Geraldine Cardigan, looking rather prettier than usual in a fresh blue gingham, whirled by in the arms of one of the Payne boys and waved to him. He saw Dan dancing with Sandra and looked away. There was no doubt about it, the girl was attractive in a feline sort of way. Dan, he observed, was rather the worse for wear. He had been stopping at the punch bowl in the corner a bit too often and his step was slightly unsteady. Sandra seemed to be in her element. She didn't, Charles thought, drink at all but she was gayer than those who did. Her trilling laughter sounded often. Her full-skirted frock of yellow stuff, billowing about her, was the merest burlesque of a milkmaid's costume. A milkmaid from the Rue De La Paix.

"Good lookin' girl!" Charles turned to find Lance Waterman, one of his cousins, at his elbow. Charles grinned.

"Here they're makin' a go of it," Lance indicated Dan who was weaving in and out in the intricacies of the dance.

"I believe they are." "Her father's been helpin' old man Cardigan ever since the market took that dip," observed Lance disappointedly and Charles reflected that it was a disadvantage in many ways to live in a town where every one else knew your business. He had heard the gossip, too, and felt rather sorry for Dan, even though he disliked him. The fellow had charm of a sort. He could quite understand what Monnie saw in him. Dan was what most girls called "frightfully handsome." Yes, there was something about him. But what a bouncer—to pass up a chance at a girl like Monnie because he wanted money. Or was he judging Dan unfairly. You could never be sure.

Charles was bored, wanting to go home, but too kind-hearted to offend his hosts by so doing. Everything palled on him now—especially these parties where there was a noisy band and everyone shouting above it. Those plonies with Monnie and her family last summer—he had enjoyed those. He had been really happy then. Happier than he'd ever been before.

"Such doings!" She was pretending to be scandalized. "What is it all about?" Charles asked lazily, without any real curiosity.

She giggled. "You are a detached person! Haven't you noticed who's among the missing?" He looked about him. There were some 30 or more at the dance so it was not easy to tell at a single glance. Besides he was sure several guests had long since withdrawn.

SPRING FLOWER SHOW WILL OPEN AT ELKS FRIDAY

Third Annual Display Is Expected To Exceed
Previous Ones

The third annual spring flower show sponsored by the Dixon lodge of Elks will open at the club house Friday afternoon. The various committees in charge have expectations of presenting the finest showing of flowers this week of any former shows. The list of applications for space for the show is being received daily. The show will open Friday evening, and continue through Sunday afternoon.

Prizes and Awards

Blue ribbons will be given for best displays, red for second best, and white for third best. Owing to the low admission fee charged the receipts from the two shows held last year were less than the expenditures. This year the same admission fee will be charged, but no prizes will be awarded other than the ribbons. If there is a surplus it will be used to purchase prizes for the next show.

General Instructions

Exhibitors must be given by the exhibitor, and must fall within one of the classifications below. The decision of the judges must be accepted as final. Neither the members of the committee, nor the Elks Club, shall be liable for loss or damage to any exhibit or container. Exhibits will be received from 8:00 A. M. to noon Friday. A triple record will be made, one copy being placed on the exhibit, one given to the exhibitor, and the third filed by the committee. The names will not appear on the exhibits until after the judging has been completed on Friday afternoon. The hours of the show will be as follows: Friday from 1:00 P. M. to 10:00 P. M.; Saturday from 1:00 P. M. to 10:00 P. M., and Sunday from 1:00 P. M. to 6:00 P. M. Exhibits may be removed after 6:00 P. M. Sunday. Anyone residing within a radius of 10 miles (in a direct line) of the Elks Club is eligible to enter.
